What to Watch for at the Park

What to Watch for at the Park

Playgrounds are great opportunities for fun, exercise and friendship, but they also pose some risks. Here's how to make the most of your kids' playground experience. Read More

Developmentally ready for more independence, but facing major challenges from relationships, friendships and hormones—guiding a teen through these years can be tricky. Read More

When you embrace the Easter Alleluia, you must be "all in," and not just partially present to the good news of the resurrection. There is no room here for the lukewarm, as Saint Augustine reminds us: "A Christian should be an Alleluia from head to toe." Read More

What is Your Opinion?

Have you ever sustained an injury at the park for yourself, or someone in your care?

☐ Yes, and it was relatively serious

☐ Yes, but it was minor enough for a band aid

☐ No, never

What to Watch for at the Park

What to Watch for at the Park

A few skinned knees or bruises from tripping during childhood are almost inevitable, it's true. But as parents and caring adults, we work to minimize injuries at places like playgrounds by observing our surroundings and preparing kids for challenges.

Here are just a few tips to consider next time you're with kids at the playground:

Age-appropriateness: There is special equipment designed for toddlers with shorter steps, slower slides, etc. Double check that your kids are on the equipment that's right for their height and ages.

Hazards: Check the ground and equipment for various dangerous materials like nails, glass and other sharp objects. Also ensure that kids are playing on exposed metal surfaces when it's extremely sunny and hot outside!

Guidelines: Remind kids of safety guidelines such as taking turns on the slide, making sure they can reach something before they jump/swing/step, and being sure they can see you at all times.

Awareness: Adults monitoring the playground is important for general safety, and especially when it comes to helping kids negotiate playground disputes.

Along with these general precautions, it's also important to just be generally "checked in" when it comes to children playing on play equipment. Only you can assess when it may be time to go because a child is too tired or upset, or when a new situation (from an aggressive playmate to broken equipment) might mean it's not the best time to play.

What is your opinion?

Have you ever sustained an injury at the park for yourself, or someone in your care?

☐ Yes, but it was minor enough for a band aid

☐ No, never

☐ I'm not sure
